Dear Hiring Team,

I had the pleasure of managing Lewis Libo Liu at Momiji Sushi Restaurants, where he proved to be one of the most diligent and creative teammates I've worked with. He started at Momiji in June 2023 as a Graphic Designer and in 2024 took on social media coordinator responsibilities. He reported directly to me in my position as Marketing Department Head.

Lewis is one of the most dedicated and devoted employees I've ever had the pleasure of working with. He consistently delivered collateral (posters, digital graphics, edited images, 4K videos, etc.) weeks ahead of deadline and always asked for more responsibilities to take on. Due to his extreme efficiency, I tasked him with managing social platforms and review channels (for 15 restaurant locations). While I trained him the first day or two, he hit the ground running and was confident with his new responsibilities within the week. Lewis is an innovative and creative powerhouse ready for the next step in his career. He will flourish under an encouraging leader who tasks him to make his own creative decisions, though he can very easily take feedback and make lightning-fast edits.

Another skill in Lewis' toolbelt is his expertise with camera, lighting, and post-production software. He can do it all - and has on several occasions at Momiji. Taking a look at momijisushi.com or our social channels @momijisushirestaurant, the vast majority of the photography and design originates from Lewis. While I contribute strategy, research, and copy, Lewis is the visual branding master of Momiji. I recommend you check out the Chef's Special campaign we put out between September and October 2025. It's a project where he received the most creative freedom from our CEO and it shows.

Lewis is a delight to work with, and I wouldn't hesitate to hire him again. In fact, I plan to! I hired him to create my own logo and will freelance with him again in the future. While he takes a minute to open up, he's a funny, insightful voice once he's comfortable with a new team member or leader. Take the time to listen and he'll share some incredible ideas for growth and retention with you, especially in the short-form video, reaction GIF, and social meme spheres.
